BEFORE WE BEGIN

A Note Before We Begin

Dear friend,

Settle in somewhere soft. Pour something you love into your favorite cup. This little book is your year, and I'd like us to walk through it slowly, side by side.

I don't see the sky as something that decides your life for you. I see it as a mirror. Each transit gently lights up something that's already stirring inside you and invites you to take a closer look. I can show you when those moments are coming. How you meet them is entirely yours, and that's where the real magic lives.

Your 2027 has a lovely shape to it. You were born with Leo rising, the sign of the heart and the crown, and this year Jupiter, the great giver, walks across that rising degree for the first time in twelve years. In June, the lunar nodes come back to exactly where they stood when you were born, a return that happens only every eighteen and a half years. And all year, Uranus works on the part of your chart that holds your career and your reputation, loosening what has become too rigid so you can breathe there again.

You're living inside a twenty-year Venus chapter that began in January 2025. All of 2027 sits in its very first sub-period, Venus–Venus, the purest Venus time there is. Venus rules your voice and your daily courage, and she also rules your work in the world. She sits in her own sign in your chart, comfortable and strong. So this is a year for letting beauty, pleasure, and what you truly value shape the way you work and the way you speak, rather than the other way around.

You also brought me real questions this year, about your health, your practice and your space, the balance between your home and your work, and where you'll live. I've answered each of them in the pages that follow this letter, and they run through every month, too, in a short box called Your focus this month.

Each chapter opens with the month's transits laid out in a table, so you can see what the sky is doing and which part of your chart it touches. Then we talk it through a week at a time, in everyday words, with a few dates at the top of each week, some thoughts on how it might feel, a handful of crystals, and a simple practice for your body.

Some months will feel heavier than others, and that's alright. A hard stretch usually means something old is finally asking for your attention. Give it that attention with patience, the way you would sit with a dear friend who is having a difficult day, and it tends to soften on its own.

Read slowly. Hold on to whatever feels true for you and let the rest drift by. Let the heart lead and the mind serve. You don't need to figure anything out. Just stay close to yourself as the year unfolds.

With love and infinite light,

FINDING YOUR WAY

How to Read This Blueprint

No astrology background is needed for any of this. Here's what each chapter holds and how you might use it.

- The transit table. Each month opens with a table listing every transit of that month, sorted by the area of your life it touches. This is the technical page, with degrees and details, there for whenever you're curious. Dates are in US Central Time and use the sidereal zodiac, so an event close to midnight may land a day earlier or later where you live.
- Your houses. Your chart is divided into twelve houses, one per sign, starting from your rising sign. Leo is your 1st house (you, your body, how you meet the world), Virgo your 2nd (money, values, voice), Libra your 3rd, and so on around to Cancer, your 12th (rest, retreat, the inner life).
- Close contacts. I treat a transit as personal when it sits within three degrees of one of your birth placements by conjunction (two by opposition), or within one degree by any other angle. The tightest contacts, measured in minutes of arc, tend to be the most noticeable days.
- Gandanta. A soft word for the knot where a water sign becomes a fire sign: the last 3°20′ of Cancer, Scorpio, and Pisces and the first 3°20′ of Leo, Sagittarius, and Aries. Planets there tend to feel like thresholds.
- Stations. When a planet appears to stop and change direction, it lingers near one degree for days, so I describe those contacts as “within about a degree.”
- The weekly conversations. Each week starts with a small list called In the sky this week: just the dates and the transits, for reference. Underneath, the week is written in plain language about how it may feel and what might help. Read a month at a time, or one week each Sunday.
- Crystals and practices. At the end of each week, a shaded box suggests a few stones and one simple practice for your body. Use what calls to you.
- Your planning pages. Before January you'll find your questions answered, your long Venus chapter mapped to 2045, your soul star, simple Vedic remedies, your year arranged by life area, a list of best days, and a page for your intention. Each month adds a Your focus this month box, and every three months a short check-in asks how your intention is going.
- The month's close. A crystal grid, a short message from your soul, four journal prompts, and one last sip. Write your answers by hand if you can, without stopping to correct yourself.

What makes your chart sing

You have an unusually strong chart. Three planets sit in signs where they're at their best. Mercury, your Atmakaraka, is exalted in Virgo. Mars is exalted in Capricorn. Venus is at home in Libra. That means your mind, your drive, and your heart each have real power. The work of your life is less about finding strength than about pointing it somewhere you love.

Your Sun, which rules your rising sign, sits in your 2nd house with Mercury, Uranus, and Pluto. That cluster tells me your sense of self has always been tied to your skill, your words, and what you can build with your own hands. It also tells me you've reinvented your relationship with money and worth more than once.

Your natal Saturn sits in your 10th house, in the sign of Taurus, near your Midheaven. You take your work seriously, and the respect you've earned was earned slowly. This year, Uranus comes to sit right on top of that Saturn, which is one of the biggest stories of 2027 for you.

Your dasha in plain language

Period	Dates	What it asks of you
Venus Mahadasha	January 18, 2025 → about January 2045	A twenty-year chapter of beauty, love, values, voice, and meaningful work.
Venus–Venus	January 18, 2025 → May 19, 2028	The purest Venus time. Let what you love and value lead.
Venus–Sun (next)	May 19, 2028 → May 19, 2029	Your chart ruler steps forward. Visibility, purpose, leadership.

Venus rules two of your houses: your 3rd (voice, writing, courage, siblings, short journeys) and your 10th (career and reputation). She's also your Darakaraka, the significator of partnership. So everything she touches this year runs along those threads: what you say, the work you do, and the people you share your life with. All of 2027 falls inside Venus–Venus.

THE SHAPE OF THE YEAR

Your Year at a Glance

Before the months, a quick sketch of 2027 by season.

Winter: the body and the self

Mars turns retrograde in your own rising sign on January 10 and backs across your Ascendant in February. Two eclipses follow: an annular solar eclipse on February 6 in your 6th house of work and health, trining your natal Sun within 28 minutes, and a soft lunar eclipse on February 20 that falls across your 1st and 7th houses, within two degrees of your rising degree. It's a season to look honestly at your energy, your body, and how you show up.

Spring: values, money, and what you're worth

Through April and May, Saturn walks the last degrees of Pisces in your 8th house and stands opposite your natal Sun and Mercury. On April 12 the opposition to your Sun is within nine minutes. In early April, Rahu crosses your natal Mars, your yogakaraka. Mars turns direct on April 1 and Jupiter on April 12, both in your 12th house of rest and the inner life.

Summer: the nodal return and the career shake-up

Around June 8, Rahu and Ketu return to the exact degrees they held when you were born. This happens about every eighteen and a half years, and it marks a fresh chapter on the axis of work and service (6th house) and rest and spirit (12th house). On June 15, Uranus meets your natal Saturn in your 10th house to the minute. Your work life, and the authority you carry, are asking for more freedom. The August 2 total solar eclipse falls in your 12th house, the strongest invitation of the year to rest, retreat, and listen inward.

Autumn and winter: crowned anew

Around mid-August, Jupiter crosses your rising degree for the first time in twelve years and stays in Leo, your 1st house, into late November. This is a blessing on you yourself: your health, your confidence, your face, your presence. October is your birthday month, and the degrees say Venus returns to her birth place around October 7 or 8, with the Sun following around October 10 or 11. Mercury, your Atmakaraka, turns retrograde on October 7 and turns direct on October 28, right on top of its own birth degree. In December, Uranus comes back to your natal Saturn a second time, and Saturn turns direct on December 23.

YOUR LONG CHAPTER

Your Chapter: Venus, 2025–2045

You're in the opening years of a twenty-year Venus chapter that began on January 18, 2025. Opening years plant the seeds the whole chapter will grow from. That's why the questions you're asking now, about your voice, your space, your health, and your home, matter so much: you are choosing the shape of the next two decades.

Venus rules your 3rd house of voice and your 10th house of career, sits in her own sign, and is your Darakaraka, the planet of partnership. Under her, the work that thrives is the work that's beautiful, relational, and spoken: teaching, guiding, recording, writing, gathering people. The work that strains is the work done out of obligation alone.

Sub-period	Dates	What it brings
Venus–Venus	Jan 2025 → May 19, 2028	Seeds of the chapter. Voice, love, values, and what you truly want to build.
Venus–Sun	May 2028 → May 2029	Your chart ruler leads. Visibility, health, confidence, purpose. A good year to step forward as a teacher.
Venus–Moon	May 2029 → Jan 2031	Your retirement season. The Moon rules your house of meditation and is your planet of life's work. Teaching moves to the center.
Venus–Mars	Jan 2031 → Mar 2032	Mars rules your houses of home and teaching. The strongest window for a move, a purchase, or a space of your own.
Venus–Rahu	Mar 2032 → Mar 2035	Rahu in your house of service. Your reach grows, perhaps far beyond your town. Guard your health and your rest.
Venus–Jupiter	Mar 2035 → Nov 2037	Wisdom, devotion, and teaching. Jupiter lives in your 4th house of home.
Venus–Saturn	Nov 2037 → Jan 2041	Mastery and legacy in your career house. What you've built becomes lasting.
Venus–Mercury	Jan 2041 → Nov 2043	Your soul planet leads. Writing, teaching, and the harvest of your life's skills.
Venus–Ketu	Nov 2043 → Jan 2045	A quiet, spiritual completion of the Venus chapter.

A first look at 2028

The first months of 2028 close your Venus–Venus seeding. Around early 2028, the degrees say, Saturn leaves your 8th house for good, and much of the weight of the last two years lifts with him. Through most of 2028, Jupiter moves through Virgo, your 2nd house, toward your Sun and Mercury, the planets of your vitality and your soul, reaching them late in the year. And on May 19, 2028, Venus–Sun begins: a year when your own light, health, and leadership take the front of the stage. If 2027 is the year you set down what's too heavy, 2028 is the year you stand up in the space that's left.

YOUR SOUL STAR

Chitra, the Bright Jewel

Your soul planet, Mercury, sits in the nakshatra Chitra, and so do your Sun, the ruler of your chart, and Venus, the lord of your twenty-year chapter. Three of your most important planets share one star. That's rare, and it tells me a great deal about you.

Chitra means the bright one or the beautiful. Its symbol is a shining jewel, and its deity is Tvashtar, the celestial architect who crafted the forms of the world. People with Chitra strong in their charts are makers: they see how something could be more beautiful, and they build it. Chitra people often create spaces, physical or spiritual, that other people feel held by. Your meditation center is pure Chitra.

Chitra's shadow is perfectionism. The jewel is never quite polished enough, the work is never quite finished, and self-worth can become tied to what you make rather than who you are. That's part of the workaholic pattern you named. The medicine is to let some things be beautiful and unfinished, and to remember that the maker matters more than the made.

Your Moon, the planet of your mind and your life's work, sits in Punarvasu, the star of the return of the light. Its deity is Aditi, the boundless mother, and its gift is renewal after depletion. However tired you've been, your mind is built to come back. Punarvasu people return home to themselves, again and again.

> A CHITRA PRACTICE
> Once a week, make something small and beautiful and leave it deliberately unfinished: a sketch, a flower arrangement, a few lines of writing.
> Sit with it for two minutes without fixing anything.
> Say aloud: the maker is already enough.

These are traditional, gentle ways of honoring the planets that matter most for you right now. They work alongside your crystals and practices, and they're never a substitute for medical care. Choose one or two that feel right rather than trying them all.

Mercury	Your soul planet; mind, nerves, digestion	Wednesday · green	Om Bum Budhaya Namah	Feed birds; give green vegetables or books; listen to calming chant.
Moon	Your mind and your house of meditation; leads from 2029	Monday · white, silver	Om Som Somaya Namah	A slow walk by water or moonlight; offer milk or rice to someone in need.
Ketu	Moving through your 12th house of rest all year	Tuesday · smoky grey	Om Kem Ketave Namah	A short prayer to Ganesha before you begin your week; give to an animal shelter.

Crystals that pair with these: rose quartz or clear quartz for Venus, sunstone for the Sun, green aventurine for Mercury, moonstone for the Moon, and smoky quartz or labradorite for Ketu. Venus's traditional gemstone is diamond or white sapphire. I've left gemstones optional; if you'd like to wear one, try it slowly and see how you feel.

LET'S SIT DOWN

Come Sit With Me

Here's where your year begins: with a pause in your own sign.

On January 10, Mars stations retrograde at 16° Leo, in your 1st house. For the next three months he'll move backward through the sign of your rising degree, crossing it in February and leaving Leo altogether by early March. Mars is your yogakaraka, the lord of your 4th and 9th houses, so his health in your chart matters. When he turns inward in your 1st house, he asks very personal questions. How is my body, really? Where am I spending energy I don't have? Where have I been leading from habit rather than desire?

Meanwhile Venus, the lord of your whole twenty-year chapter, drifts across your natal Neptune in your 4th house on January 8 and 9, within 5 minutes on the 9th, while Uranus stands exactly opposite her from your 10th. Home and career, your private dreams and your public role, face each other across the chart. It's a beautiful opening note: the planet running your life pausing over the most tender, dreamy part of your inner home.

SAMPLE

There's a quieter thread too. Through the month, the Sun, Mercury, and Pluto move through Capricorn, your 6th house of work and health, making soft, supportive angles to your natal Jupiter and Neptune in your 4th. On January 25, the Sun meets Pluto there, sextile your natal Jupiter within 24 minutes, and Mercury meets Rahu 1°40′ from your exalted natal Mars. Your everyday work and your private faith are speaking to each other. It's a good month to make small, sustainable changes to how you spend your days.

YOUR FOCUS THIS MONTH

Health and energy. Mars turns retrograde in your 1st house on January 10. Slow your pace and notice heat or tension in your head. Rest before you push.

Your practice. On January 8 and 9, Venus blesses your home. Daydream about your ideal teaching space, but don't decide yet.

Home and balance. Start protecting one full day off this month, beginning with the first Saturday you can free.

Week One · Jan 1–7 · A Playful Start

IN THE SKY THIS WEEK

Jan 1	Sun meets Mercury
Jan 3	Venus square Jupiter
Jan 7	Mercury quincunx Ketu

The year opens on a light note. The first few days favor fun, creativity, and the simple pleasure of making something just because you want to. If there's a hobby you set aside last year, pick it up again before the routines of January set in.

Around the 3rd, there's a gentle tension between comfort at home and the urge to take up more space in the world. You don't have to resolve it. Just notice which one your body leans toward.

By the 7th, your thinking and your feelings may not quite line up. A plan that sounded wonderful may feel a little hollow in your chest, or a feeling may refuse to fit neatly into words. Give both a day. They'll find each other.

CRYSTAL COMPANIONS

Carnelian keeps creative fire warm and steady, perfect for a week that favors play over productivity. Sunstone reminds your Leo heart that joy is part of your nature, not a reward. Moonstone softens the moments when your thoughts and feelings don't quite line up, helping you wait for them to meet.

EMBODIMENT PRACTICE

On New Year's Day, spend twenty minutes making something with your hands: a collage, a drawing, a pot of soup, a page of handwriting. No goal, just play.

When you're done, sit with it for a minute, breathe slowly, and ask: what do I want more of this year? Write one sentence.

Week Two · Jan 8–14 · The Dream at Home

IN THE SKY THIS WEEK

Jan 8 Venus trine Neptune
Jan 9 Venus opposite Uranus
Jan 10 Mars turns retrograde · Mercury quincunx Jupiter · Sun quincunx Ketu
Jan 14 Mercury trine Uranus

The 8th and 9th are soft, dreamy, and tender. Something about home may move you: a memory, a room, a longing for a place or a feeling you haven't had in a long time. It's a lovely couple of days to make your home more beautiful, or to rest there without guilt.

Around the 10th, something shifts in your energy. For the next three months your drive turns inward. You may find you have less appetite for pushing, competing, or starting new things, and more interest in looking at how you've been using your strength. That isn't a loss. It's a review. Questions worth carrying gently: Where am I tired? Where am I leading on autopilot? What would it feel like to move from desire instead of duty?

By the 14th, a clear and practical idea may arrive about your work or your daily routine, one that also honors a dream you've kept quiet. Write it down. It may take months to unfold.

> Amethyst by your bed supports the dreamy, tender days around home and helps you rest without guilt. Red jasper offers slow, steady stamina as your drive turns inward, a quiet battery rather than a jolt. Rose quartz holds the heart of your home, a reminder that being at home with yourself is enough.
> EMBODIMENT PRACTICE
> On the 10th, lie on the floor with your legs resting up on a chair or sofa, knees bent. Breathe slowly into your belly for five minutes.

> Let your body be completely supported. Notice where it's holding on. Say quietly: I don't have to push today.

Week Three · Jan 15–21 · The Quiet Foundation

IN THE SKY THIS WEEK

Jan 15 Sun quincunx Jupiter · Venus trine Saturn · Mercury meets Pluto
Jan 16 Venus square Mars
Jan 18 Mercury quincunx Mars
Jan 21 Sun trine Uranus

This is a steady, grounding week. Around the 15th, your attention turns to the practical heart of life: work, health, routines, the ordinary things that keep everything running. It's a good week to look at what actually supports you and what simply fills your days.

SAMPLE

You may feel a quiet, deep confidence in your faith or values, the kind that doesn't need to be explained to anyone else. At the same time, there may be a small adjustment needed in how you present yourself. Let both be true.

Around the 16th and 18th, restlessness may bubble up. If you feel impatient with yourself or someone else, move your body before you speak.

> Smoky quartz grounds you when the week turns practical and asks you to look honestly at your routines. Green aventurine encourages healthy, steady daily habits. Tiger's eye supports the quiet confidence of beliefs you don't need to defend to anyone.
> Take a twenty-minute walk at an easy pace. Every few minutes, stop, plant both feet, and take three slow breaths.
> Notice what you see, hear, and smell. Let your body set the speed, not your to-do list.

Week Four · Jan 22–31 · At the Edge of the Water

IN THE SKY THIS WEEK

Jan 22	Mars quincunx Saturn
Jan 25	Sun meets Pluto · Mercury opposite Ketu · Mercury meets Rahu
Jan 26	Venus trine Ketu
Jan 27	Mercury opposite Jupiter
Jan 28	Sun quincunx Mars · Venus trine Jupiter

Around the 22nd, check in with your stamina. If you've been running on adrenaline, this is a good moment to slow down.

The 25th is a strong day. A clear, practical insight about your work may arrive, along with a surge of drive to act on it. Your mind is sharp. Your energy wants to do something. Choose one thing and start it, but don't overcommit.

On the 26th, a sweet moment of connection, maybe a kind word, a thoughtful message, or a feeling of being understood. By the 27th and 28th, something feels like it's completing, as if an old chapter is turning its last page. You may not know what the next chapter holds yet. That's fine. Let yourself stand at the threshold for a while.

CRYSTAL COMPANIONS

Hematite helps you notice when you're running on adrenaline and invites you to come back into your body. Citrine lends clear, sunny focus for the strong day around the 25th. Moonstone keeps you company at the threshold, when one chapter closes before the next one shows its face.

EMBODIMENT PRACTICE

On the 28th, light a candle at dusk. Sit with it for five minutes, breathing slowly.

Name one thing you're ready to complete and one thing you're curious to begin. Say both out loud, then blow the candle out.

CLOSING THE MONTH

Your January Crystal Grid

Lay this out on a Friday, Venus's day, on a cloth or a clear surface. Spend three minutes with it each morning: hold the center stone, state one intention, and breathe slowly into your belly.

- Center: Red jasper, for Mars turning inward in your own sign.
- North (your path): Rose quartz, for Venus at the root of your home.
- East (your 1st house): Sunstone, for the Leo self.
- South (your 4th house): Amethyst, for your natal Neptune and the dream at home.
- West (your 6th house): Green aventurine, for work and daily routines.
- Around the edges: Carnelian and moonstone, for creative fire and gentle thresholds.

Message From Your Soul

I set the crown down for a moment and listen to my own heartbeat.
I do not need to roar today.
I want to know what I am made of when no one is watching.
The house I was born into is dreaming beside me.
I let it.
My strength is still here.
It is only resting.

Journal Prompts

1. Where have I been leading from habit rather than desire?
2. What does my body need from me this season?
3. What dream for my home have I kept quiet?
4. What is ready to complete, and what is curious to begin?

One Last Sip

January asks you to rest your crown for a little while. Not because you've lost anything, but because the strongest lions know when to lie in the sun.

Take the slower pace as permission. There will be plenty of time for roaring later in the year.

LOOKING BACK

The Year in Review

We've come to the end of the year together. Before we close, here are the five threads that ran through it, gathered in one place.

Crowned anew. Mars turned retrograde in your own sign in January and crossed back over your rising degree in February, asking you to listen to your body and your pace. In May he crossed it again, moving forward, and your energy came home. Then, around August 13, Jupiter crossed your rising degree for the first time in twelve years, and the Sun, Mercury, and Venus followed him. A new twelve-year cycle of growth for you yourself began.

Freedom in the work. Uranus met your natal Saturn in your 10th house on June 15, to the minute, with Venus beside them both. He turned back in September and met your Saturn again in late December. The career you built so carefully found more room to breathe.

The nodal return. Around June 8, Rahu and Ketu returned to the exact degrees they held when you were born, opening a new eighteen-year chapter on the line between serving and resting. Earlier, in April, Rahu crossed your exalted natal Mars, stirring a new appetite for meaningful work.

What you're worth. Saturn faced your natal Sun and Mercury from your 8th house in April, and again in December when he turned direct opposite your Mercury. In between, Jupiter moved into your 2nd house of money and values, where he'll stay through much of 2028.

The Venus year. All of 2027 sat inside Venus–Venus, the purest season of your twenty-year chapter. Venus met your exalted Mars in March, faced her own birth place in May, returned home in October, and blessed your career on Christmas Day. And in your birthday month, Mercury, your soul's own planet, turned direct right on top of its birth degree.

A Year-End Message From Your Soul

I began the year by resting my crown and end it wearing it lightly.
I listened to my body.
I named my worth out loud.
I let the walls of my work
open to the wind
and found I could still stand.
I came full circle
to a place I knew,
and saw it from higher up.
Love came home to me in October.
I am glad to be exactly who I am.

A Blessing For What's Ahead

May the growth that began at your rising degree this summer keep unfolding gently for years. May your work feel like yours, shaped by what you love rather than what you were told. May you always say your worth out loud, without apology. And in May 2028, when your chart ruler, the Sun, steps forward to lead the next chapter of your Venus years, may you walk into the light ready to be seen.
